THE MAHER-SHARKEY FAKE GENERALLY CONDEMNED.

Opinion Prevails That the Public Should Have Been Notified by the Men That They Would Not Mix It Up-Are Jeffries and Fitz Afraid of Each Other?

Sporting men were outspoken yesterday in their condemnation of the Maher-Sharkey fake fight, which disappointed a crowded house at Philadelphia on Friday night. Those who were unfortunate enough to make the trip from this city to the ringside declared that the flasco was the worst ever perpetrated upon the boxing public and that the fighters were wholly to blame. It was the consensus of opinion that when the Magistrate bound Maher and Sharkey in $5,000 to keep the peace they should have immediately notified the public that under the circumstances they could not indulge in a fight on its merits, but would merely put up a contest for scientific points. In that way Maher and Sharkey would have afforded ample protection to the patrons of the sport, many of whom would have refrained from turning their hard-earned dollars into the box office windows and remained at home, Instead of this, however, Maher and Sharkey allowed the impression to be spread broad-cast that they would fight for all they were worth, so that the crowd showed no hesitancy in pouring into the puilding. The gate re-ceipts, therefore, amounted to about $8,000, It is said, of which 70 per cent. was to go to the fighter who insisted upon having the money paid to them before entering the ring By the articles of agreement, the money was to be withheld in the event of a fake, and for that reason Maher and Sharkey, having agreed between them to put up a contest that was not on the level, insisted upon securing their share in time to lock it up out of the reach of the club management.

In other words, the fighters were bound to get the gold, no matter whether they satisfied the patrons of their bout or not. Both men in interviews yesterday said that nobody could blame them for the exhibition they provided, in view of the chances they ran of going to fail. But that does not alter the fact that they wilfully faked their mill and oodwinked those who made it possible for the club to hang up a purse.

This is not the first queer-looking fight in which these men have engaged. Sharkey's reputation received a black mark when he met Fitzsimmons in San Francisco several years ago and was declared the winner by Referee Wyatt Earp on an alleged foul. Eye sitnesses of this encounter have always insisted that Fitzsimmons was the victim of s lob of which Sharkey must have been cognizant. The battle between Sharkey and Corbett at the Lenox A. C. of this city later on has not been forgotten. Corbett's second, McVey, it will be recalled, jumped into the ring and stopped further fisticuffs, whereupon Referee John Kelly, believing that all was not on the square, took it upon himself to declare all bets off, a proceeding that caused no end of ugly rumors. Maher's fight with Kid McCoy at Coney Island two years ago has often been called a fake by close followers of ring matters, the inference being drawn that Maher deliberately quit.

With these facts in mind, therefore, it is not at all strange that many sporting men, when Maher and Sharkey were matched, were inclined to the belief that the men might not go at top speed. In their previous meeting here four years ago, Maher and Sharkey were accused of faking the first six rounds to avoid police interference and incidentally give the big crowd of paying patrons a run for their money. Then they got to work in the seventh round and did so much "rough house" execution that Police Inspector McLaughlin promptly jumped into the ring. Since that time Maher and Sharkey have been intimate friends. Those who have seen them together and have heard them talk have never believed that they could get together in the ring in mortal combat. Maher has been out of the ring ever since McCoy whipped him so ignominously, and has spent much time and money at the race-track. Maybe that was a reason why he jumped at a chance to pick up some easy money in Philadelphia. At any rate, there were namerous sporting celebrities in town yesterday who were willing to bet that the Irish puglists, even if there had been no arrests, would have longed through six rounds at a pace not calculated to create excitement.

Before Magistrate Fisenbrown the two fighters appeared in Philadelphia yesterday morning. Little time was lost in releasing them and the club managers from bail, in which they were held on Friday night. When and Sharkey stood before the Magistrate, the latter said to them:

"When you were held in bail last night! been intimate friends. Those who Maher and Sharkey stood before the Magistrate, the latter said to them.

"When you were held in bail last night I said that if you kept the peace you would be discharged on your appearance to-day. I understand that you kept the peace perfectly and you are accordingly discharged.

"I am the only sufferer," said the club manager. The soreheads in the crowd smashed $1,000 worth of furniture, broke down the platform, the box office and parts of the floor. When asked, before leaving the cour room, if they had anything to say, the puglists declined to discuss the flasco in any way.

Judging from the way they are behaving, t looks as if Jeffries and Fitzsimmons are fraid of each other. At long range they have been talking fight for the past six weeks, At the Maher-Sharkey fake on Friday night defiries and Fitzsimmons were ringside spectators. They were in plain view of each other, and the crowd looked for some sensational developments. But when there was a general demand for a speech, both Jim and Bob dodged. Just why the champion did not get into the ring and say that he was ready to make a match with the Cornishman, and just why the Cornishman did not make a verbal statement of his willingness to sign articles, pazzled the crowd, for it had been noised attended to send cooked and thought as soon as James and Robert. clised about that us soon as dames and Robert bould ratch sight of each other they would use no time in making themselves clearly for slaughter took a new lease on life and deadlocked the proceedings. It is 100 to 1 that they will stick to Spalding, too, because they know what to expect in case they weaken."

The Philadelphia National League club has taken the case of Lajole to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, where argument on an appeal from a decision in the Court of Common Pleas is now under way. Col. Rogers still believes that Lajole's contract with his club will be pronounced legal, in which event those players who have jumped the "often clause" and have signed with the American League will be compelled to return to their original employers.

A letter has been received by the manager of the University of Pennsylvania crew to the effect that in all probability Wisonsin will not enter the intercollegiate regatta on the Hudson this year. It is said that the Badgers cannot stand the expense and that the reverses of the past two years at Poughteepsie have served to dampen the ardor of the undergraduates so much that the necessary subscriptions for defraying the expenses of the trip are not forthcoming.

Enoch Wishard, the former trainer of Richard Croker's horses in England, has been criticising the British turf lately quite freely. Here are some of his remarks:

"There's only one thing over there that they do not do and that is hang you. They do not want Americans, especially those who are in the game for money. The society people race in England and they only do it for the prestige they obtain from winning races. Suppose an American claims a horse out of a selling race in England and suppose the horse has been carrying bottom weight. Before the American has had a chance to run him once at his old weight, the stewards add about forty pounds to the scale and do it so as to prevent him from winning. You cannot win with an American horse unless you hold a high social position and there is even less chance of your winning with an English one. That has happened a number of times in my own experience. There is not a self-supporting stable in England. There are only two tracks which they add money to the purses—Ascot and Manchester. At the others the entrance fee amounts to about twice the amount of the purse, so that you only put up your own money to give the other fellow a chance to win it and they take good care that an American gets no chance. At most of the tracks no admission fee is charged. They are out in the country and everybody gets in free. The story that Edward Corrigan will not race in England again because of his wife's ill health may be true, but the average American does not need any excuse other than his treatment there. They will all leave there in a short time."

a hard hitter Lyman was an excellent general, and during his career in the roped arena won many fights. Lyman was about 34 years old, but up to the time of his death he always possessed a youthful appearance. He started out in life as a carpenter, but soon gave it up for boxing.

Lyman's most important battle was with George Dixon. He fought the ex-champion when the latter was just blossoming as a pugilist. The fight took place at Boston on Jan. 2, 1888. Lyman, who has met both George Wright and Eugene Hornbacker, was thought to have an excellent chance against Dixon, and his backers lost a pile of money when Dixon knocked him out. The contest lasted five rounds, but it was a vicious one, and both men were badly punished. Lyman endeavored to induce Dixon to tackle him again, but the pair could not come to terms. Since that time Lyman did not engage in many mills. He devoted his attention to holding finish fights in private. Lyman had a great following and any time he arranged a mill he was certain to have a large crowd on hand. He numbered among his friends many prominent clubmen and sports who willingly contributed from $10 to $25 for a seat at any encounter. Lyman could boast without fear of contradiction of never being a party to a fake or shady fistic exhibition. In 1894 Lyman became temporarily blind and through the medium of Jack Adler received a benefit in this city. From the proceeds of the affair Lyman went into business. He ran a pool and billiard parlor on Eighth avenue between Thirty-first and Thirty-second streets. The venture was only a fair success and Lyman had to give private boxing lessons. He was an excellent trainer and developed a number of pugilists who have made a name for themselves. Lyman will be buried from his late residence, 421 West Thirty-lirst street, this city.

YACHTING NEWS. Plan for New Bacing Association -Atlantic

The annual meeting of the American Yacht Club will be held at the Waldorf-Astoria next Tuesday evening, and it is expected that several members will agree to build for the one design classes for rating during the coming season. The annual subscription banquet of the club will be served the same evening.

The Race Committee of the Atlantic Yacht Club has issued a circular letter to yachtsmen on the value of the prizes won during the past season. The prizes in the annual regatta ranged in value from $25 to $250, for he daily runs of the cruise from $15 to $150, and the series prizes were from $50 to $500. In figuring the winners of the series prizes ten points were credited to the winning yacht, eight to the second, six to the third, four to the fourth and two to the fifth. During the season six regattas were held by the club and five regattas were sailed under its direction as part of the series of the Gravesend Bay Association. Forty prizes were won by twenty yachts, the record standing as follows:

The Race Committee acknowledges receipt of donations in the form of cups from Commodore David Banks and Rear Commodore H. J. Robert, and in the form of money from ex-Rear Commodore Edward Weston, Vice-Commodore R. P. Doremus and D. H. Valentine. Instead of giving a cup to each winner, for which nine times out of ten the recipient has no use, orders are issued on a well-known silversmith for silver equal in value to the amount won by each yacht during the season. One or more pieces of silver may be secured thereon, but each piece must be engraved, the inscription to be submitted to and approved by the Race Committee.

The Regatta Committee of the New York Yacht Club next season will be ex-Commodore S. Nicholson Rane, chairman: Newbury D. Lawton and E. H. Wales.

At the annual meeting of the Williams E. Long; Treasurer, Adolph King; measurer, Frederick Eardiey; steward, Edward Padborg; sergeantat-arms. Jacob Flanders; trustees, Louis Rave, William W. Sir Thomas Lipton has given a cup to the Cibica Yacht Club which is to be raced

Chicago Yacht Club which is to be raced for next summer by 21-footers belonging to the club.

A meeting was held on Wednesday night at the Hotel Manhattan by the representatives of several of the prominent yacht clubs on the Sound with the object of forming a Yacht Racing Association. The plan is an association composed of the clubs situated on the west end of the Long Island Sound to advance yacht racing, congeniality and a closer relationship of the clubs in that locality. This project is advanced by the Morrisania Yacht Club and at present is merely in its infancy. It calls for at least two combination regattas during the season in which 1400 in prizes will be offered in the different classes. The association will be governed by a body representing and elected by the representative clubs, each club to have a voice prorata with the number of members enrolled on its books, one representative for each fifty members or fraction thereof; no club to have less than two representatives. A suitable set of rules will be drafted by this body to meet the requirements.

Representatives from the Morrisania Yacht Club of Casanova, Stuyvesant Yacht Club of Port Morris, Williamsburg Yacht Club of North Beach and Morris Yacht Club of North Beach and Morris Yacht Club of Pelham Bay Park were present and took the matter in hand enthusiastically. Another meeting will be held at the Manhattan in February at which it is expected at least two other prominent clubs will be represented.

This association will in no way conflict with or be antagonistic to the Long Island Sound or any other yacht racing association of clubs enrolled in such organization, but is intended to afford these clubs an opportunity to advance yacht racing in their immediate vicinity which would be advantageous to all concerned.

YACHTSMAN LAID AT REST. Large Gathering at Funeral Services of the Late J. V. S. Oddle.

The Church of the Heavenly Rest, in Fifth avenue, between Forty-fifth and Forty-sixth streets, was crowded yesterday morning by yachtsmen and friends of the late J. V. S. Oddie, Secretary of the New York Yacht Club. They were present to attend the funeral services and to show their respect and love for their dead friend and clubmate. It was a remarkable gathering, and long before the time set for the services the church was filled, and many were standing in the aisles. Part

FEATHERED AND FURRY EX-HIBITS HOMEWARD BOUND.

Thirteenth Annual Display Has Been the Most Successful in the History of the Association -- Metropolitan Exhibitors Win a Fair Share of the Prizes.

After the most successful week in its his-After the most successful week in its his his tory, the New York Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Association wound up its annual show last night in Madison Square Garden It was the thirteenth yearly exhibition, and it made more money than any show the association has ever conducted. All the ex-hibits were full of life and noisy after their manner—whether in crows, quacks, cackles, sweet thrills, honks or meows—until the lights were turned off for the last time. Then, in the dim glare of the few lights left burning, the exhibitors began to hustle to get their birds out of the building. Pigeons kept in city lofts were carried away in baskets by their owners, but those from suburban lofts and poultry for the same destinations were carried off in openwork crates on express wagons. The birds from a distance were packed in ventilated and comcomfortable coops made of wood and canvas or in the case of pigeons in compartment coops that looked much like the section of letter boxes from a country Post Office. These exhibits were sent off on the midnight trains and are speeding homeward this morning by special express.

In consequence of the popularity of the cat division of the show the exhibitors have started an organization of Eastern fanciers of felines. A meeting was held on Thursday and a committee of five was appointed to draw up a constitution and select officers for the new club, to report at a general meeting yesterday. On the committee were Mrs. E. N. Barker, Mrs. Helena A. Mix, Miss L. C. Moeran, Mrs. Bevill Champion and Dr. Ottolengui. The association will be known a Pacific Cat Club and the Beresford Cat Show of Chicago is intrenched in the middle ground. At the last Crystal Palace show, ground. At the last Crystal Palace show, London, there were 1,021 cats on view, and as great a future is hoped for the next show of the Atlantic Cat Club. A full set of officers and an Executive Committee were elected at the meeting.

The exhibitors residing in Greater New York and in the towns nearby won a fair share of distinction. All but two to make entries in the canary and cage bird section were residents of Greater New York. There were twenty-eight exhibitors, who showed 217 birds. Taking all other departments of the show, there were 3,098 entries sent in by 443 exhibitors, of whom 128 may be claimed for the metropolitan district. The blue ribbons have been sent to Canada and to nearly every Eastern State, but the following metropolitan district exhibitors carried off one or more ribbons.
